MEDICATION IMPORTS

A complete medication history at your fingertips.

Our medication solution for long-term and post-acute care is empowering providers to treat with confidence.

MEDICATION IMPORTS

Long-term and post-acute care providers are no strangers to the challenge of getting a clear, up-to-date history of patient medications. After spending time searching health records, and calling pharmacies and physicians, they're left with only limited information. And worse, many patients struggle to remember what they're taking and how.

Fortunately, Medication History for Reconciliation is designed to help. This technology gives providers real-time access to complete and accurate medication histories at the point of care. It also empowers providers to confidently prescribe the right therapies and limit the risk of adverse reactions. As a result, patients are better able to adhere to their treatments and experience better health outcomes.

How integrated technology provides a complete view of medication history.

This unique technology is embedded within electronic health record systems, pulling data from PBMs and pharmacies nationwide to give providers a complete view of a patient's medication history over the last year.

1

A provider initiates a request for medication information within a patient's EHR.

2

First, the technology finds the patient. Then, using advanced algorithms, it requests data from pharmacies and PBMs across the nation.

3

The data is neatly organized in an industry-standard file and returned to the patient's provider, making it clear and easy to read.

See it in action.

A provider visits an elderly patient who is homebound. The patient can't remember his treatment plan due to early stages of dementia.

Missing information from the start

During the visit, she asks her patient about his medications. He provides a case with mismatched, unidentified pills. It is clear more information is needed.

A quick search

Normally, the provider would begin calling pharmacies and physicians to gather missing information, which could take days and put the patient at risk for an adverse event. Fortunately, the provider has access to Medication History for Reconciliation.

A clear and complete view

Right away, she taps into the patient's EHR and sees an accurate and updated medication history: two prescribed pain management medications and a cardiac beta blocker.

Confidence in clinical care

This provider can confidently develop a treatment plan without worry or time-consuming administrative tasks. Instead of making phone calls, she spends the rest of the visit caring for her patient.

Key advantages of Medication History for Reconciliation

- ✓ Quickly view up-to-date and accurate medication lists.
- ✓ Eliminate the risk of manual transcription errors and unreported drugs.
- ✓ Reduce the risk of medication errors, adverse drug events, and hospital readmissions.
- ✓ Identify controlled substance abuse—right away.
- ✓ Obtain medication histories for patients across multiple care locations.
- ✓ View more comprehensive and detailed medication information.
- ✓ Spend more time caring for patients rather than on administrative tasks.
- ✓ Ensure compliance with the National Council for Prescription Drug Programs (NCPDP) new SCRIPT standards.
